NYSIM/CMS host “Simulation as a Teaching Tool”

On April 7th- April 10th, NYSIM hosted the Simulation as a Teaching Tool faculty development course. This is the 3rd year that we’ve held this international and interprofessional course - 21 participants from Brazil, Ecuador, and the US joined us in this fully interactive course. Participants from medicine, nursing, and mid-wifery were immersed together in small group practice, large group discussions, role plays, and full scale simulations over four days. Feedback from the participants were overwhelmingly positive. We look forward to hosting this course again in 2016, and hope to see you there!

NYSIM Hosts First Annual Symposium for Fellows in Healthcare Simulation on May 4, 2015

NYSIM Fellows Kristen Uquillas and Halley Ruppel co-chaired the Symposium for Fellows in Healthcare Simulation on May 4, 2015 at NYSIM. Over 30 fellows and fellowship directors attended the one day symposium. The symposium provided the opportunity for fellows and fellowship directors to network, share research and capstone projects, and learn about career development in simulation education. Four plenary speakers presented on diverse topics relevant to healthcare simulation fellows. Maria Shiau, MD, presented on promotion and teaching portfolios; Barbara DeVoe, DNP, presented on interprofessional learning in simulation; Adam Levine, MD, presented on the role of mentorship in simulation career development; and Rami Ahmed, MD, presented research on the characteristics of medical simulation fellowships in North America. Thirteen fellows presented original research and capstone projects, ranging in topics from in-situ simulation to resident remediation and interprofessional learning.

The symposium also included a panel of fellowship directors, who discussed the key elements, function and future of simulation fellowships. The symposium concluded with an off-site networking reception. Participant feedback was positive and we are hoping to host this as an annual event.
